

“Ambitious, daring and foresighted, everyone should read GHW2. This is a brave report, and everyone will take something from it...”

Professor Gill Walt,
LONDON SCHOOL OF HYGIENE AND
TROPICAL MEDICINE

“Excellent ... I highly recommend this treasure trove, which is full of food for thought, to scholars and health workers alike”

Dr Maria Isabel Rodriguez,
RECTOR OF UNIVERSITY
OF EL SALVADOR 1999-2007

“We shall require many more social innovations, like the People’s Health Charter, the People’s Health Movement and the Global Health Watch, if mankind is to survive.”

Dr. Suwit Wibulpolprasert, MD.,
SENIOR ADVISOR, MINISTRY OF PUBLIC HEALTH, THAILAND

For everyone who remains disappointed by the inability to address the fundamental causes of global ill-health and premature death, this is the alternative. GHW2 looks fearlessly and

ABOUT GLOBAL HEALTH WATCH

GLOBAL HEALTH WATCH, an initiative of the People's Health Movement, Global Equity Gauge Alliance and Medact, to bring together academics, civil society organisations and social movements to promote health and improve the performance of global health institutions. Over a hundred individuals have collaborated to produce the second report which consists of over twenty chapters, including chapters on the World Health Organisation, the World Bank and the Gates Foundation. The book covers a range of health challenges including the continued growth in global poverty, climate change, war, food prices, and water and sanitation. More information can be found on www.ghwatch.org

The Peoples Health Movement (PHM) is a large global civil society network of health activists supportive of the WHO policy of Health for All and organised to combat the economic and political causes of deepening inequalities in health worldwide and revitalise the implementation of WHO's strategy of Primary Health Care. Information on PHM South Africa can be found on <http://www.phmovement.org/cms/en/circles/183/page>.

Teasdale Corti Revitalizing Health for All Project: Learning from Comprehensive Primary Health Care Experiences is a unique partnership of researchers, policy makers and practitioners from low, middle and high income countries, which is seeking to increase the evidence base about comprehensive primary health care.
